SIGCAS Computers and Society is an online publication accessible via the ACM Digital Library. The newsletter aims to be an effective communication vehicle between the members of the group. The editors invite contributions of all types of written material (such as articles, working papers, news, interviews, reports, book reviews, bibliographies of relevant literature and letters) on all aspects of computing that have a bearing on society and culture. Submissions may be sent to editors_sigcas@acm.org.

Readers and writers are invited to join and participate actively in this Special Interest Group. Membership is open to all, for US$25 per year, and to students for US$10 per year. The link to join up can be found on our web site, at <http://www.sigcas.org>.
